Is it not our duty to add to the effective forces of the State in all the agencies of human progress and improvement? Is it not in our power to exercise a healthful influence upon each other?...The influence of our profession in the next generation depends on a large degree on the manner in which we fulfill our duty...the obligations of that trust reach far beyond the present generation. —November 1877

NYSBA TIMELINE

1876 – 2012

1876 New York State Bar Association is established, immediately begins pushing for court and civil procedure reforms.

1886 As part of the suffrage movement, legislation removes restrictions on admitting women into the practice of law. Kate Stoneman becomes first female member of New York State Bar Association and later first female graduate of Albany Law School.

1896 NYSBA proposal becomes what is now the Permanent Court of Arbitration in the Hague, the first global means for settling disputes among nations.

World War I Association promotes lawyers serving military members in draft board appointments, counseling dependents of servicemen, advising on the letting of contracts for war-related procurement, and finding positions in law offices for returning vets.

1920 NYSBA adopts Canons of Ethics, known today as Code of Professional Responsibility. Leads to adoption of ethics standards in courts and in law school education.

1924 In response to influx of immigrants, State Bar's new Committee on American Citizenship devotes itself to promoting the education of immigrants in the English language and the workings of U.S. government.

1932 Association approves, in principle, the concept of public defenders as "an inherent right."

1934 State Bar establishes Judicial Council to bring about necessary reform of administrative procedures in the court system.

1941 In response to rise in automobile accidents, governor signs NYSBA-initiated Motor Vehicle Safety-Responsibility Act, which establishes provisions for public safety, responsibility at motor vehicle accidents and record-keeping.

World War II NYSBA recommends lawyers serve as Government Appeal Agents for Selective Service boards and organizes corps of lawyers to provide legal assistance to members of the military.

1958 Association supports and participates in first national Law Day celebration to promote the United States' reliance on the rule of law over the Soviet Union's rule of force.

1966 Association successfully works to liberalize state's archaic divorce laws resulting in the creation of additional grounds for divorce, changes in alimony rules, and a complex conciliation program.

"MOMENTUM,"

HE SAID.

"The legacies of the enthusiasm of previous administrations carry over."

That was what C. Addison Keeler said most impressed him about the New York State Bar Association, as he delivered his president's address on Jan. 29, 1960.

As State Bar marks 135 years, 'momentum' still building for key issues

by MARK MAHONEY

Momentum is what has characterized the goals and achievements of the New York State Bar Association ever since its organizational meeting convened in the Assembly Chamber of the old state capitol at precisely "3-1/2 o'clock, P.M." Tuesday, Nov. 21, 1876.

It was momentum fueled by the integrity of the corruption-busting New York City Bar Association that led to the formation of the statewide organization that day. A year later, at the first annual meeting in 1877, the State Bar's first president, John K. Porter, a former Court of Appeals judge, set the tone for the organization.

"The influence of our profession in the next generation depends in a large degree on the manner in which we fulfill our duty ... the obligations of that trust reach far beyond the present generation," said Porter back then. That mission remains unchanged today.

"The hallmark of our profession is service to others. At our best, we are imbued with a selfless devotion to the interests of those we serve—our clients,” current State Bar President Vincent E. Doyle III said in his first President’s Message in June 2011. “The rewards of our profession are many, but chief among them is the satisfaction of helping someone who reaches out to us with legal needs.”

Values Never Change

The momentum in seeking a fair, just and efficient court system was one of the State Bar’s original tenets in 1876 and it continues to this day with efforts to reform the court process and make it more efficient and fair. Among the State Bar’s initiatives in its first year were to push the State Legislature to refine the Code of Civil Procedure and to take action to investigate abuses in the court and propose remedies in order to ensure the fair administration of justice.

The momentum in seeking equality for citizens continued to build over time.

The New York State Bar Association, for instance, was among the first bar associations in the nation to admit women and African-Americans. That effort continued during the labor and civil rights movements, up through today with efforts to ensure equality of marriage rights for same-sex couples.

The momentum in seeking justice for those who lack the financial ability or understanding of the legal process has built from the organization’s beginnings, through world wars, and into the present day. In the mid-1940s, the State Bar encouraged its members to provide legal assistance to members of the military. In 1989, the association commissioned a landmark study that investigated the legal needs of indigent citizens. That momentum continues today with efforts to expand pro bono representation to veterans, immigrants and others of limited means.

The momentum in ensuring that lawyers receive up-to-date training and education continues with the growth of Continuing Legal Education programs. The State Bar offers more than 200 New York-specific courses that take place live, online, and via CD, audio and video. In addition, the State Bar provides its members with ethics education, access to reference books, free legal research, and updated information on codes and regulations—all to ensure that residents can obtain the best legal representation available.

A Prestigious Membership

Since that inaugural meeting in 1876, membership in the nation’s largest voluntary state bar association has grown from 356 to more than 77,000, with attorneys representing all aspects of legal practice.

Noted members and leaders over the past 135 years have included U.S. presidents Grover Cleveland and Chester A. Arthur, Supreme Court Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, several New York governors and many prominent judges and attorneys from around the state.

Throughout its history, the State Bar has served the public by educating member attorneys, fighting for a fair and just court system and standing up for the people. ■

1968 After years of debate within the State Bar over how to reform courts and ease congestion, largely in civil cases, state Legislature creates 125 new judgeships.

1969 NYSBA takes lead in Fair Trial Free Press Conference that sought to balance First and Sixth Amendment rights and foster better relationship between press, courts, lawyers, judges and law enforcement authorities.

1970-1973 Association fights proposed Rockefeller Drug laws that imposed harsh sentences for minor and victimless drug crimes, on grounds they would overwhelm criminal justice system. NYSBA also fights for drug treatment programs for addicts.

1973 Association launches Action Unit to focus public attention on need for far-reaching court reforms.

1989 Association commissions study and presents plan to increase voluntary pro bono representation by lawyers.

1997 NYSBA successfully fights law that made it illegal to advise elderly citizens about how to lawfully transfer assets in order to qualify for Medicaid.

2001 Association study and recommendations leads to adoption of Code of Professional Responsibility to address issues of interdisciplinary practice.

2001 Association joins with other organizations to provide assistance, pro bono legal services and other support to families of victims of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

2007 Association advocates for long-overdue pay raises for state judiciary, pushes for reform of village and town courts to ensure fair administration of justice, and pushes for federal legislation to protect attorney-client privilege.

2008 NYSBA expands on efforts to improve civics education by creating new website designed to help instill civic values and participation of younger children. The New York State Consortium for Civic Learning website provides civics-education resources, activities and information to educators for grades preK-12.

2009 With longtime support from the State Bar, Rockefeller drug laws are modified to remove mandatory minimum sentences and allow judges more flexibility in sentencing offenders to shorter jail terms and counseling.

2010 New York becomes the last state to adopt no-fault divorce, a position long supported by NYSBA, which will reduce litigation over ending marriage and allow parties to focus on issues of children’s welfare and distribution of marital assets.

2011 With strong support from NYSBA, New York passes law allowing members of same sex to be legally married. U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee votes to override 1996 Defense of Marriage Act, which denies equal federal rights to same-sex couples nationwide. Association also expands successful pilot program to provide pro bono legal assistance in civil appeals.

State Bar Past-Presidents Consider Their Significant Accomplishments While in Office

LAWRENCE E. WALSH
(1966-1967)

During his presidency, he vowed to make the Rule of Law a reality for the oppressed, sought to eliminate political partisanship in the re-election of sitting judges, and urged planning major new court-houses as a reminder of the importance of liberty and justice. ABA President: 1975-1976 and independent counsel to the Iran-Contra investigation.*

ROBERT MACCRATE
(1972-1973)

His presidency was marked by his concerns for the entire legal profession. He influenced many of today's state and nation professional tenets, including opposing allowing lawyers to partner with non-lawyers in multi-disciplinary practices and spearheading the ABA's landmark, eponymous, "MacCrate Report." He was the 1999 recipient of the State Bar's Gold Medal and the 2001 winner of the ABA Medal.*

WHITNEY NORTH SEYMOUR, JR.
(1974-1975)

Initiated NYSBA program to preserve historic courthouses; co-founded NYBF Fellows; established House of Delegates Annual Dinner; created NYSBA public service awards; coordinated James Polshek's design for State Bar Center and Norman Laliberte's banners for Great Hall; founded State Bar News; led opposition to NYSBA PAC; pushed merit selection of judges.

HON. ROBERT P. PATTERSON, JR.
(1978-1979)

He championed more legal services for the public good; endorsed the first "Bridge the Gap" CLEs for young lawyers, the first State Conference of Bar Leaders, certification of attorney specialties and court reorganization; and gave individual members a voice in the Association's administration.*

ANTHONY R. PALERMO
(1979-1980)

Proud to promote public confidence in the legal profession by supporting establishment of statewide lawyer registration and creation of Clients' Security Fund (now Lawyers Fund for Client Protection) governed by Trustees, appointed by and accountable to all NY Court of Appeals Judges, and service as Charter Chair of Fund.

ALEXANDER D. FORGER
(1980-1981)

We Presidents – momentary custodians of the Association – implement initiatives earlier begun, address issues arising during our moment and bequeath to successors for implementation our own brilliant initiatives. In my day: a permanent client security fund, resisting FTC jurisdiction and engaging the perennial challenge of access to justice.

HALIBURTON FALES, II
(1983-1984)

Haliburton Fales, II (1983-84) Strongly supported the creation of state Interest on Lawyer Account (IOLA) Fund; expanded the Bar's legislative program; created the Action Unit, "Improvement of Process of Civil Litigation"; advocated for court funding and greater time for review of Court of Appeals nominees.

HENRY G. MILLER
(1984-1985)

As President, I tried to reach those not always heard, by starting a Committee on Diversity for minority attorneys, a Committee on Volunteers to serve the community (Phoenix House, et al.), creating our first Town Hall and an Institute of Public Affairs – hopefully permanent forums for community leaders.

JUSTIN L. VIGDOR
(1985-1986)

During my tenure the issues demanding attention were court merger, court facilities improvement, professionalism, judicial vacancies and tort reform, many in one form or another still engage the House of Delegates today. As the French say, "the more things change, the more they remain the same." Other issues were a liability insurance crisis and the unsuccessful struggle to replace the Code of Professional Responsibility with the Rules of Professional Conduct.

MARYANN SACCOMANDO FREEDMAN
(1987-1988)

Becoming the first woman President of our Association and completing a full and successful term that included initiatives to reform election laws, administrative adjudications and workers' compensation procedures, and improved diversity in the Association, was a large and dramatic step in demonstrating conclusively to everyone that women lawyers are fully as capable, as creative, and as able to lead as our male colleagues.

HENRY L. KING
(1988-1989)

My significant accomplishment was the adoption of mandatory CLE for all lawyers. Thirty six states had CLE and I argued that it would be a mistake if New York were not included. Issues such as self certification of lawyers listening to tapes were discussed and adopted. CLE has been great for N.Y. lawyers.

JOHN J. YANAS
(1989-1990)

During my presidency, the House of Delegates, after considering a report from a Committee appointed by Chief Judge Wachtler recommending a Mandatory Pro Bono Plan to satisfy the unmet needs of the poor for legal services, approved a report from a Special Committee of our Association recommending an enhanced voluntary plan rather than a mandatory plan.

ANGELO T. COMETA
(1990-1991)

He advocated for increased judicial compensation and proper funding for the Interest on Lawyer Account (IOLA) Fund. He led the Bar's successful effort to oppose a proposed sales tax on legal services. The Bar created the Lawyer Assistance Program and the Departments of Law Practice Management and Pro Bono Affairs.*

He conceived the Statewide Conference on the Solo and Small Firm Practitioner in New York, which developed 100 recommendations to help solo and small firm practitioners; established citizens panel on court operations; and issued numerous op-eds across the state opposing mandatory pro bono service.*

JOHN P. BRACKEN
(1992-1993)

We persuaded the governor and legislature to increase judicial salaries. We raised members' participation in pro bono activities to 49%. And we launched a successful counter-attack to Vice President Quayle's claims that the United States had too many lawyers who were a drag on the economy. The Association's forthright defense of lawyers, during a political campaign that scapegoated them, demonstrated NYSBA's courage and independence.

G. ROBERT WITMER, JR.
(1994-1995)

During a year of significant political change resulting in the first Republican Governor in decades and the Contract With America at the federal level, the State Bar continued to support state tort reform, a unified court system and the merit selection of judges. We articulated our basic goals in a major Strategic Planning initiative which identified future leaders and provided guidance for several years.

MAXWELL S. PFEIFER
(1995-1996)

Worked diligently to improve the public perception of lawyers; unveiled www.nysba.org; created the Committee on Judicial Independence; legislative successes included eliminating mandatory sequestration, increasing jurors' compensation and amending the Code of Professional Responsibility to permit the sale of a law practice.*

M. CATHERINE RICHARDSON
(1996-1997)

Led the Bar's response to the TWA Flight 800 disaster and received a plaque from Mayor Rudolph Giuliani; highlighted the good lawyers do in a response letter to BMW's "Hang Up on a Lawyer" mention on their list of "20 Things To Do in Your Lifetime;" created the Task Force to Consider Tort Reform Proposals; received the American Bar Association's Harrison Tweed Award for pro bono legal services.*

JOSHUA M. PRUZANSKY
(1997-1998)

Created a four-point plan to continue the Bar's ongoing tort reform efforts; created the Committee on Mass Disaster Response and led the Bar's groundbreaking federal lawsuit to declare Section 4734 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 unconstitutional. The law, declared unconstitutional in September 1998, criminalized advising elderly people about the lawful transfers of assets to qualify for Medicaid.*

JAMES C. MOORE
(1998-1999)

The 20th century's final NYSBA presidency was filled with new challenges to professional obligations and societal needs: governments seeking ways to reduce funding for the legal needs of the poor; pressures from multiple sources to restrict the independence of the individual lawyer; competition for business from within and without the profession; the increasing impact of law school debt; and, the perception that civility within the profession was a quaint notion and no longer important.*

THOMAS O. RICE
(1999-2000)

Whether lawyers and other professionals should be allowed to join in various practice arrangements requires study of Bob MacCrate's authoritative Preserving the Core Values of the American Legal Profession. To have appointed

Bob chair of the committee that produced his report was the singular achievement of my tenure in office

PAUL MICHAEL HASSETT
(2000-2001)

During my term as president-elect, I quickly became aware that NYSBA stands as the major representative of the New York practicing lawyer to the judiciary and the court system in general. This opportunity to participate in accomplishing significant improvement in the justice system is a truly satisfactory accomplishment.

A. THOMAS LEVIN
(2003-2004)

Created and implemented NYSBA diversity program and Quality of Mandated Representation Committee, each winning ABA awards; conceived Cy Pres program, enhanced Law, Youth & Citizenship program; improved state-wide profile of NYSBA; organized five International Section Cuba trips; promoted the Rule of Law; defended attorneys from unfair criticism and advocated for professionalism.

KENNETH G. STANDARD
(2004-2005)

Implemented Special Governance Committee's diversity recommendations for House of Delegates and Executive Committee; led efforts against raising bar exam passing score; led effort opposing foster care aging out at 18; created NYSBA Youth Law Days (ongoing); initiated first "balanced lives in law" study; initiated study of collateral consequences of criminal justice system involvement; honored surviving NY lawyers responsible for Brown v. Board of Education victory.

A. VINCENT BUZARD

Established task forces on lawyer advertising, attorney-client privilege, the Kelo decision and the Law-suit Abuse Reduction Act which issued recommendations that year; established statewide "Ask A Lawyer" newspaper columns, People's Law School, established first Katrina fund for justice system; used member e-mails to override Governor's veto of funding for legal services; started Friday night House dinners, House directory, President's June 1 reception and held President's receptions around state.

MARK H. ALCOTT

He was a national spokesman for the profession, leading the fight for independence and diversity of the bench and bar. He initiated proposals to reform judicial selection procedures, develop a new civil rights program, and end mandatory retirement in the profession. He created the highly successful Empire State Counsel program that promotes pro bono legal services, and he advocated an extensive reform agenda.

KATHRYN GRANT MADIGAN
(2007-2008)

Launched successful 3-year Membership Challenge and first Presidential Blog. Championed

Civil Gideon; Cy Pres awards; increased state support for IOLA and interest rate comparability; ratification of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child; Compact for Long Term Care; Marriage Equality for Same Sex Couples; Judicial Salary Reform; and lawyer satisfaction and work/life balance.

BERNICE K. LEBER
(2008-2009)

Task Force reports: Wrongful Convictions (1st U.S. bar association to study all causes); Climate Change;

Privacy; State of our Court-houses and Small Practice/Solo Lawyers; adoption of Model Rules of Professional Conduct; NYS Sen. Judiciary Comm. testimony for Chief Judge Lippman; established Federal Legislative Priorities Committee; proposed reforms for trials of Guantanamo Bay detainees, adopted by ABA.

MICHAEL E. GETNICK
(2009-2010)

With the teamwork of my two predecessors and two successors, we helped turn two resolutions of the House of Delegates into legislation addressing wrongful convictions and the right to same sex marriage. I consistently met with members of the State Legislature and Governor's Office to discuss and promote such legislation, part of which was passed during my term and part passed during my successors' terms.

STEPHEN P. YOUNGER
(2010-2011)

Launched a highly publicized study of the future of the legal profession; Achieved several important legislative successes, including passage of a government ethics bill, same-sex marriage, no-fault divorce and the judicial compensation bill; Initiated recommendations to promote use of New York law in international transactions and the formation of an international arbitration center in New York.

VINCENT E. DOYLE III
(2011-2012)

With the theme "Justice for All," we have been addressing top priorities such as immigration representation and veterans' issues with special committees that will report soon. We released a comprehensive report on the impact of court funding cuts in New York State, and we have advocated for appropriate funding for civil legal services and legislative measures that would reduce wrongful convictions. We have also continued the State Bar's emphasis on diversity and will soon announce the results of the President's Diversity Challenge. ■
